

TERNA

Year 2025

Varieties: White Giró and Premsal

Winemaking zone: Vi de la Terra de Mallorca

Vinification: biodynamic

Climatology: The year 2024 ended with a cumulative rainfall of 216.6 litres during the final quarter, and 2025 began with a warm, dry, and windy January, recording only 15 litres of precipitation.

February brought just 25.9 litres of rainfall, and the onset of spring led to an accumulation of 70 litres during March. In April, barely 13.2 litres were recorded.

May and June followed the same trend, with lower accumulations compared to other areas of the island.

May closed with 21.4 litres and mild temperatures, giving way to a warm and dry June. This marked the prelude to a summer characterised by intermittent heatwave episodes.

The harvest began on 11 August, and during the third week of harvesting, 15 litres of rainfall refreshed the vineyards of Felanitx, while 11.8 litres cleared the dust from those in Porreres. It concluded on 9 September, a warm month with light rainfall, which watered the already harvested vineyards with a total of 26 litres.

Vinification: Maceration, fermentation and ageing of the two varieties with their peels (brisa) separately for 10 days. Tasting determines the moment of pressing and fermentation ends in a stainless steel vat.

Ageing: After fermentation, it rests for 6 months with the fine lees in a concrete egg.

Alcoholic degree: 12%

ATT: 5.31 gr/lit

Residual sugars: 0,2 gr/lit

Clarification: no

Bottling: May 2026

Market launch: June 2026

Tasting note:

It has a surprising intense golden colour produced by the vinification technique – brisa – and the intense coloration of the peels of the two varieties, but especially of the Giró. In the nose it presents a blend of white fruits – pear and apple – honey and some vegetal touches. Without excessive acidity, it is well-rounded and balanced.

Comments:

A terna is a group of three: three friends who wanted to make a wine to have a good time, making it and sharing it.

The opposite sides of the die total 7, the magic number that according to the Kabbalah is the divine law that governs the Universe.

MESQUIDA
MORA